SAND TRAY: A WINDOW ON THE SOUL

Joanna DeAngelo, Clinical Director & Art Therapist

Sandplay Therapy is an experiential therapeutic vehicle to engage psyche as it journeys on the road to individuation. Like fairy tales, active imagination, dreams, and art, it partakes of image and symbol to communicate its truth. Often misapprehended as a therapy only for children, sand play enables children, adolescents, and adults to access preverbal levels inaccessible by verbal means. Attendees will receive an overview of the field today as well as several case examples to illustrate the process and stages. A short experiential exercise will be offered at the end for those who wish to participate.

Joanna DeAngelo is a Licensed Mental Health Counselor, a Board Certified Registered Art Therapist, and a Certified Addictions Professional. She has taught and presented for many years and worked with both adults and children for over two decades. She is currently Clinical Director at the Susan B. Anthony Recovery Center in Pembroke Pines, and is a member of the CJSSF board.

ARCHETYPE, AFFECT & ATTACHMENT

Myrna Little, Jungian Analyst

Research in attachment theory and the neurosciences suggests that individuals can have such great significance for each other that their relationship is not interchangeable. We will explore how these attachments develop and how therapists as well as parents, friends, colleagues, and lovers may live with more meaning, intersubjectivity, and effectiveness. We will also examine the therapeutic process itself—and the task of analyzing that which is implicit, nonverbal, and nonconscious, and resides in mental endogenous, archetypal processes.

Myrna Little, Ph.D. is a clinical psychologist in private practice in Dallas, a member of the Dallas Group Analytic Practice, and a Jungian Psychoanalyst. Currently she is a Clinical Assistant Professor at Southwestern Medical School, Department of Psychiatry, and an Assistant Editor of the Journal of Analytical Psychology.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING: THE EFFECT OF ELIADE’S STORY ON COPPOLA’S YOUTH WITHOUT YOUTH

Danila Crespi, Jungian Analyst

Scott Feaster, Professor of Literature and Film

A two-part event: In the morning workshop we will explore what effect aging has on the auteur/director. While a director’s late works are often unfavorably compared with the earlier works, with age a director no longer has to keep up with trends and may feel freer to break new ground. We will view film clips to illustrate this, focusing on Francis Ford Coppola’s Youth Without Youth (2007)—his first film in ten years, made at the age of 68 and based on Romanian author Mircea Eliade’s novella. After lunch, we will view the entire film, followed by a conversation reflecting on questions that include: What does “directed by” mean? What does “writing with the camera” mean? What does age teach about creativity?

Danila Crespi is a Jungian Analyst in private practice in Miami Beach. She is director of the Florida Association of Jungian Analysts.

Scott V. Feaster has a Ph.D. in Comparative Arts and is an assistant professor at Broward College.

“For many centuries human beings have explored the mysteries and meanings of dreams, most often imagining ourselves as center and source of the dream. When we listen to dreams in a different way – when we tend to their living presence, something quite extraordinary happens. Dreams come alive and tell their stories. Our perception changes, our intuition opens, and we hear and learn from the timeless intelligence of Nature as well as our own deeper sense of well being.” – Stephen Aizenstat

In this introductory seminar, Dr. Stephen Aizenstat offers both traditional and emerging methods of dream work that explore common dream themes, nightmares, archetypal images, and the recurring dream.

DreamTending is a method of working with dreams that considers dream images as “living images.” It makes the particularity and presence of these images available to the dreamer. The wisdom of ancestral callings, the instinctual knowledge of animal visitations, the musings of the soul are attended to from a psyche-centered, rather than person-centered, perspective. The “intelligence” of the dream is listened to from the inside out.

To “tend” a dream is not just to interpret or analyze it. The figures and landscapes of dreams are experienced as alive and moving about with a certain degree of autonomy. In a very practical and accessible way, the craft of DreamTending offers the possibility of listening deeply to the voices of the dream images themselves as they come forward to offer their insights and perspectives.

DreamTending appreciates that dreams carry an inner knowing, an innate sensibility, and an element of potency that affords each of us the capacity to open to the depths of our own experience. When we tend a dream, images come “awake,” imagination is animated, and we participate in life more fully rooted in the way of the dream.

DreamTending is based on four essential concepts:

- The dreaming psyche is multidimensional
- Dreams are alive
- Everything dreams
- Dreams happen now

Visit www.dreamtending.com for more in-depth DreamTending information.

Stephen Aizenstat, Ph.D., is a clinical psychologist, marriage and family therapist, and the founding president of Pacifica Graduate Institute. For more than 35 years he has explored the power of dreams through the study of depth psychology and the pursuit of his own research. He has collaborated with many masters in the field, including Joseph Campbell, Marion Woodman, Robert Johnson, and James Hillman; as well as native elders worldwide. Dr. Aizenstat has conducted hundreds of dream work seminars throughout the United States, Europe, and Asia.

THE END OF THE AGE OF BLING

Patrick Parham, Spiritual Consultant & Financial Advisor

The current financial and economic crisis is humbling the American Empire and changing the deeply unconscious acquisitiveness of the American Dream. Both as individuals and a nation, we are being forced to give up our illusory and misleading version of the American past and our dream of managing history. It is different this time: “A world that once indulged American profligacy is no longer willing to do so.” New limits will be placed upon us, and we must awaken to this new reality and alter our basic assumption that more is always better. But with these losses will also come gifts, if we know where to look. Mr. Parham will help us explore some of the ways each of us might act to ensure our basic economic wellbeing by separating what is essential from what is merely “bling”—and begin to reawaken to lives based primarily on relationship, spirituality, and self-awareness rather than the acquisition of money and power.

Patrick Parham, M.A., spent 25 years in global trade, headquartered in New York while also living in Japan, Switzerland, and Jamaica. He currently teaches at St. Thomas University and is a trained Spiritual Director. Patrick also serves as treasurer of the Center for Jungian Studies of South Florida.

ACTIVE IMAGINATION: PATHWAY TO WHOLENESS

Linda van Dyck, Jungian Analyst

The Ego, the outer physical reality, is not enough to experience the fullness of our lives. To understand our potential and mission in life, each of us must find a way to unify the conscious and unconscious parts of our psyche—to wake up to the potential of our being and then commit to helping those parts of ourselves that need attention in order to fully help others. In this workshop, we will look at how to use Active Imagination in its various forms to focus and to become aware of the unconscious reality within each of us so that our mind and heart may become conscious of and attuned to the Self.

Linda van Dyck, M.Div. LMHC, earned a degree in Analytical Psychology at the C.G. Jung Institute. She studied and worked in Switzerland for ten years after completing a Masters in Divinity, in psychology and counseling from Yale University Divinity School. A member of IAAP and a senior training analyst with the Inter-Regional Society of Jungian Analysts, she is in private practice in Palm Beach, Florida. She presents retreats, workshops and speaks on various topics of Jungian Psychology.

THE SPIRAL JOURNEY: IMAGES OF REMEDIOS VAROS’ JOURNEY TOWARD WHOLENESS

Mary Wells Barron, Jungian Analyst

This lecture explores the archetypal images of the extraordinary artist Remedios Varo, who painted her story of individuation. Her work reveals a uniquely feminine perspective of the alchemical process of transformation. Varo was trained in classical and surrealist art, but her magical images are wholly unique. They reflect her deep rapport with the archetypal world, which she expresses with the detail of a medieval miniature and the sensibility of a woman attuned to a profound understanding of soul.

Mary Wells Barron, M.A., M.B.A., M.I.M., is a Jungian analyst in private practice in St. Louis, Missouri. She received her analytical training at the C.G. Jung Institute, Zurich, and has been a member of the training and admissions committees of the Inter-Regional Society of Jungian Analysts, for which she teaches and chaired a committee on curriculum. She has a special interest in the healing power of images and in the body as voice of soul.

HITCHCOCK’S NOTORIOUS: AN EXPLORATION OF ANIMA & ANIMUS

Rick Overman, Jungian Analyst

In Notorious, Alfred Hitchcock weaves romance and suspense into a dark fairy tale of power, domination, and addiction versus compassion and relationship—a tale of timeless significance and current relevance. Ingrid Bergman and Cary Grant’s intensely passionate but deeply conflicted romance provides a rich matrix for the exploration of Jung’s notorious yet essential ideas about the anima and animus archetypes. Whether seen from the perspective of the collective or the personal, Notorious serves as an inspiring primer on the function of anima and animus and their relationship to the development of personality.

Rick L. Overman, Psy.D, is a licensed psychologist and Jungian psychoanalyst in private practice in Fort Lauderdale and Boca Raton. Dr. Overman is a senior training analyst for the Florida Association of Jungian Analysts and a past president of the Center. His prior CJSSF film presentations include Forbidden Planet, Finding Neverland, American Beauty, and Eyes Wide Shut.
